Conflict: Human Needs Theory | J. Burton | Palgrave Macmillan

Abstract. How can a human needs perspective inform the practice of conflict resolution? This chapter attempts to answer this question on the basis of my own experience with "interactive problem-solving," an approach to the resolution of international conflicts that finds its fullest expression in the problem-solving workshop. 2 This approach derives from the work of John Burton' and ...

Applying a Human Needs Perspective to the ... - Springer

It is widely questioned if a "needs theory" can be useful for conflict resolution. This is an important question and leads to the necessity for clarifying the definition of "needs theory." Like many other "theories," this one has a name without having substance.

The human needs theory provides a framework of analysis that centers on the unmet human needs. The theory that unmet human needs are the remote source of conflict and violence in every society is a well established idea in the fields of politics, international relations, and development studies particularly in the specialism of peace and conflict resolution (Marker, 2003: 43; Burton, 1990a: 16, 1990b: 82; Coate and Rosati, 1988: 30). Human needs theory stipulates that there is more ...

Ethical Evaluation of African Religiosity amidst Violent ...

Abstract. Although the concepts of human needs, conflict, and peace are interrelated and affect all aspects of human life, academics and practitioners have usually addressed them in a rather fragmented manner. Human needs theories propose that all humans have certain basic universal needs and that when these are not met conflict is likely to occur.

subsequently, conflict. What distinguishes Human Needs theory from the Frustration-Aggression theory is that the former is concerned only with absolute requirements (needs) while the later is also concerned with wants and desires. Burton further states that there are fundamental universal values or human

CHAPTER 2 CONFLICT AND PEACE: A THEORETICAL ANALYSIS

This edited volume presents selected papers capturing Herbert Kelman's unique and seminal contributions to the social psychology of conflict analysis and resolution, with a special emphasis on the utility of concepts for understanding and constructively addressing violent and intractable conflicts. Central concepts covered include perceptual processes, basic human needs, group and normative processes, social identity, and intergroup trust, which form the basis for developing interactive ...

Herbert C. Kelman: A Pioneer in the Social ... - Springer

Human needs theorists argue that one of the primary causes of protracted or intractable conflict is people's unyielding drive to meet their unmet needs on the individual, group, and societal level. F For example, the Palestinian conflict involves the unmet needs of identity and security.

Unmet Human Needs | Beyond Intractability

If the human needs thesis is false, if it is human aggression that is the problem, then there must be reliance on coercive means of social control to avoid conflict. It is only if needs satisfaction is the problem that conflict resolution can be justified as a process.

Conflict Resolution: The Human Dimension - John W. Burton ...

In Part Two Burton explores the political context of conflict, examining in particular relations between authorities. Chapter Seven argues that conflict could be understood and handled more effectively if there were some generally agreed upon theory in which to base approaches to conflict. Burton claims that human needs theory can supply this base.
