The Greatest Leadership Article I've Ever Read

Why Is Strengths-Based Leadership Important? A strengths-based approach can benefit your leadership and your team's performance in several ways. First, admitting that you need help, and accepting it from your team members, promotes not only effective delegation , but also a consensual or "laissez-faire" leadership style . Asking for help is a sign of strength, not weakness, and it enables you to concentrate on what you do best.
